Dear DGIC Friends,

Happy Spring! In just one month, we will be welcoming German companies to Washington, DC for our first AHK USA Member Fly-In. Join us on April 26-27 and make your company's voice heard by sharing your experience with policymakers on doing business in the United States. We hope you enjoy this month's Delegation Debrief, which features an update on German-American discussion on multilateral development banks, insights on the U.S. Solar market, the AHK World Business Outlook, and more.

Focus on Washington

Top 25 Healthcare Technology Leaders of Washington, DC

Leaders in Washington, DC's healthcare industry are revolutionizing healthcare technology. This year, the Healthcare Technology Report features the top 25 Healthcare Technology Leaders of Washington, DC for their innovations. From turnkey programs to combat COVID-19 to solutions to eliminate hand tremors, these leaders span from CEOs, COOs, VPs, and more. Read more here.

Economic Policy Highlights

AHK World Business Outlook

Many companies are adapting supply chains and business models to meet the state of the global economy and its changing circumstances. The global AHK network conducts the World Business Outlook to survey the economic situation and future expectations. What successes and challenges is your company facing in international business? Take the 5-minute survey here.

Yellen Speaks with German Minister for Economic Cooperation & Development

Secretary of the U.S. Department of the Treasury Janet Yellen spoke last week with Germany's Minister for Economic Cooperation and Development Svenja Schulze on evolving the multilateral development banks to address challenges like climate change, pandemics, fragility, and conflict. Read the press release here.

Solar Projects vary Across U.S. States

Climate conditions are not the only factor that dictate large-scale solar projects. These projects are largely driven by specialized project developers and vary from state to state. Climate and state policy have a huge effect on solar projects since different normative, legislative, and industrial-political frameworks vary across the United States. When it comes to imports of solar technology to the U.S., Germany has increased its share by over 30% in the last year. Read more \(in German\) from GTAI's Ullrich Umann.

Looking Ahead...

AHK-USA Fly-in to Washington, DC

Join us April 26-27 in DC for a deep-dive into Washington's policy ecosystem. Gain first hand insights on how to navigate Washington, DC. This member-exclusive DC Fly-In opportunity offers the chance to meet with officials from the U.S. Administration, U.S. Congress, and others. The trip includes:

- Understanding the priorities and agenda of the current Congress
- The benefits of engaging with the U.S. Chamber
- The importance of governmental affairs for medium-sized, foreign-owned companies
- Networking reception

ICYMI

As part of the German Support Office for the US-Germany Climate and Energy Partnership, we welcomed the German Offshore-Wind Initiative (GOI), Adelphi, and representatives from German offshore wind companies for a lunch briefing in our office, where Adelphi presented the key results of their report on "Offshore Wind Supply Chain in the US and Germany". We also joined the group and over 200 business leaders from the German offshore wind industry for an evening reception "Bier and Brats" to kick-off the Business Network for Offshore Wind (IPF) in Baltimore, Maryland.
